

MY PATHWAY TO ABSOLUTE SUCCESS

WHAT I CONSIDER SUCCESS

I enjoy success in everything that I do. No matter what it is. I am always successful. I put the principle into motion for myself. I speak my word. I claim the truth, which I am and the results are ALWAYS absolutely marvelous.

I ask myself from time to time why it is that I do not enjoy success in many of the flights of fancy upon which my thinking sometimes flows. I wonder why it is I do not have all of the money that I dream of occasionally. Why don't I have the riches the world looks at and judges men by. Why is it that every thought that passes through my consciousness is not instantly manifest, if this is the principle and how it works?

These questions bring with them their own answer.

I have built in a special "failsafe" condition in my thinking apparatus. I have incorporated in my physiological and psychological make up through the use of the principle the feature for automatically counteracting the effect of an anticipated possible source of failure. This failsafe condition in my nature prevents the actions of my thoughts from being effective according to a preconceived plan.

This failsafe condition in my being is absolutely essential to my continuance as a "human being" on planet Earth. For should I bring forth every thought that I think in my present state of development, many catastrophic events would flood forth in my life and quite likely I would never have lived beyond the age of one or two.

Manifesting myself as a human being I continually relate myself to others. I continually think of myself in terms of what others have, what others want, what others do, what others need to make them happy, what the demands of my body are, what the demands of my family are, what I see advertised on all of the media, what emotional responses I have to things and to others in my world.

The list is endless.

If I were to have instantly manifest my "every thought" my world would be absolute chaos rather than the marvelous expression of absolute success that it is and has always been.

The failsafe mechanism, which, I have inculcated into my "human" system, relates only to my "human" attitudes, my "human" conditioning, my "human" desires and wants, and my "human" frailties as I understand them.

I remember so vividly the legendary tale of the Phrygian King Midas who had such a lust for gold that finally he got his perfect wish that everything he would touch would turn to gold. His riches were unimaginable. But one day he caressed his lovely daughter and she turned to gold. The food he ate turned to gold. The gold he desired he had in great abundance. The gold he desired ultimately destroyed him.

So long as I remain human in my thinking there is absolutely no way to have every thought I think manifest in my life and affairs—fortunately!

To illustrate this I need only remember the hateful thoughts that have crossed my mind when someone did me wrong or when someone even just inadvertently made an improper move in traffic on the city street. My "disgust" and my "anger" were inhumane and had the universal law carried out these irrational responses to my world tragedy would have resulted for me and for others.

I have created in my being the quality of being able to put specific causes in motion and then just like my computer, I am asked even after I decide to erase anything, "Are you sure you want to erase this?" To which I must further answer either "yes" or "no." If I do not give a proper answer the computer will not erase the program or information, but will let it remain until I can think more rationally.

Also like my computer, my brain not only asks if I want to erase or change a condition even after I have been so very emotionally emphatic about it, my brain keeps the program in its subconscious filing cabinets so that should I change my thought and want to "recall" the information it is still totally in tact and ready for my continued use of whatever was the information that I thought that I wanted to erase.

If something so simple as a physical computer created by me to work for me has its fail-safe devices which I have built into it—how much more has my brain, my body and my world a built-in fail-safe conditioning so that I will not foolishly and accidentally press the self destruct button and put to an end all of the efforts I have brought about in this lifetime.

I have this modality in my constitution not to keep me from having everything that I could ever want, rather to provide me with everything that I could ever want. The model of my reality contains the provisions as to the mode of procedure or the manner in which something is to take effect for me. It is the structure of the idea rather than the substance of its manifestation that brings results.

Just as my computer questions me, so the modality of my programing for myself has its built-in questioning nature which asks logical propositions accordingly to my asserting or denying the possibility, impossibility, contingency or necessity of my choices.

Continuously I am asking myself whether what I desire in my objective world is what I desire in my subjective mental realm. Fortunately there are many decisions that must be made before any action is taken. Just as I must put my key in the ignition before I start my car—before that many things had taken place. Namely I had to decide to go to the car. I had to decide to get into the car. I had to decide to sit down. I had to decide to shift the gears once I put in the key: yet another fail-safe conditioning. Then I had to release the brake, still another fail-safe programing. Then I had to use the brake and the accelerator to provide gasoline to the engine of the car determining its progress and speed. Fail-safe illustrations in my physical world by the score.

My physical body has its modalities so specifically programed into it that I marvel at the genius of its full operation.

When I feel heat or cold my brain must first interpret whether it is hot or cold. Do I "want" to feel pain or am I too busy to take time for it right now? The brain makes this decision and acts upon it. It will not accept into the brain the information that there is pain unless I accept this idea. I can turn off any sensation that is not beneficial to me at any given time and then turn it back on when I have time to experience it wisely.

When injured and my first thought was "helping" others, my own pain was "nonexistent" until I had "time" for it. So great can be my point of concentration, or my ability to categorize and compartmentalize my physical bodily functions that even without knowing it in so graphic a manner, I am indeed the master of my human body as well as my mental self.

The physiological aspects of my body I control so beautifully and the psychological conditioning of my world, my life and my experiences, over which I am master, when I choose to take mastership, are all controlled by the brain.

Whether the brain functions harmoniously with what I desire for myself or whether it is in dis-function with my desires depends upon the conditioning I do TO MY BRAIN. My brain is only a file cabinet and a network of fibers which catalogue and categorize the information it has and by pre-programing, it places these pieces of "information" in what appears to be a right relationship to itself and causes the body and emotions to function based on this input.

My hand held computer is instantly responsive to my input and reports exactly what it is that I desire to hear. My brain has the same, albeit greater, capacity, but it has been programed to think that it cannot do things.

The only reason my brain will not perform for me the majesty that it is is that it has been programmed not to.

Why would I allow my brain to be programed so that it would not function at capacity?

I program my brain so that it will not function at its peak capacity because the moment that I perform at each subsequently higher level of awareness, all of the former relationships fade away and are no more. I cease to be human playing the game of limitation which I have enjoyed for so long and express my divine reality domain which knows only of abundance and giving, only success and right action, only of harmony and love.

These divine virtues are my reality. I have for a time chosen to think they were unattainable and for this reason not worthy of my pursuit.

Today I know better and choose to put into motion the cause that brings about the choice of my heart.

EXERCISE:

I choose the possibilities, impossibilities, contingencies and necessities of my universe.

I make all of the possibilities of my life.

I make all of the impossibilities in my life.

I make all of the limiting or expanding contingencies in my life.

I set the parameters for the necessities in my life.

I determine by my thought what experiences I desire in my life and put into motion only such causes which will bring to me the outpicturing that I consider valuable and valid for me.

For me success is the fulfillment of the reality I am.

For me success is total control over the manifest world in which I live.

I speak my word now: I AM A SUCCESS!

I am master of my mental filing cabinet in my brain.

I select whatever it is that I think about.

What I think about I put forth in my world of experiences.

I am a joyful center of perfection, success and fulfillment NOW.

SUCCESS IN MY PERSON-AL LIFE

Everything that I do flows first from my personal relationship with myself. It does not matter whether what I do is monumental or simple. It does not matter whether what I do is beneficial for me or for others. It does not matter what it is that I do—everything that I do flows first from my own personal attitude about it.

Whether I am conscious about it or not, important to me is that "people in my world like me" and this is something that I will do most anything to achieve. I will act silly when there is nothing to be silly about just to get attention. I will smile when there is nothing to smile about. I will do outlandish things only to get attention even when this attention is not fully beneficial to me.

My built-in fail-safe system will not allow me to fulfill anything until I have pre-programmed myself to "consider it." Then, once having considered it, it is placed in the conditional area of my thinking system. Not yet to be acted upon. This is just one of the primary steps in the process. However it is a most basic step.

My desire to be liked in my personal life at all costs often costs dearly. People think that I am a fool when it is only an act to get attention—albeit attention which is to me non beneficial. My desire to be liked in my personal life is often purchased with gifts, with false love, with possessive attachments, with meaningless words.

Fortunately the universal principle that operates in my experiences acts basically upon intensive programming. There are times that principle appears to give immediate and irrational responses. These are times of accident, chance and luck. When the reality is known there had been no accident, no luck or chance involved. Everything had been pre-programmed in the great internal computer within every being and the results were forthcoming.

This can be confusing to me at times. For I KNOW that I have not had such intensively powerful negative thoughts about anyone or anything.

What I often forget is that I am not a single being. I am a multiple being. I have avenues of my personality and of my beingness that do not always show on the surface.

I am an inside being. I am an external being. I am an internal being. I am an awake being. I am a sleeping being. And there is the rub.

Inside my consciousness is a sleeping giant, which is me. Not being aware of this sleeping attitude is the limitation I have taken for being real in my universe.

The idea of sleeping giant is a glorious illusion. Yet it is more than an illusion. This sleeping giant includes what I am thinking while I am "sleeping."

Often my emotions are so powerful and so dynamic while I am sleeping that I wake up in a sweat, or I wake up having had such a busy night conducting great business projects, which mostly, the moment I awake are forgotten.

The talent of remembering dreams is quite a rare one. It can be a very beneficial talent when it is used wisely. What do dreams mean? How can I remember dreams? How can I change the actions that are happening in my dreams? How do I know what is meant by my dreams? Are my dreams prophetic? Just what do my dreams mean?

In a nut shell:

All time is right now. All place is right here. Since this is true. My dreams are my awareness of myself in other dimensions of my livingness. I may be aware of my other nature and the life that I am leading in my "otherness" in the oneness that I am right now, for then is now and now is then and all time is right now. Hence, this moment I am living an infinite number of lifetimes. I can be conscious of one or all of them when I choose. To be aware of other lives while playing the game of life on planet Earth basically has little beneficiality to it. For it is what I am doing now that is the fullness of whom I am RIGHT HERE!

My emotional attitude relative to myself here and now affects me in all other levels of my awareness. How absolutely beautiful a being I am here reflects upon how marvelous I am in these other dimensions of my beingness. And of course how beautiful and loving I am in other levels of consciousness reflect on who I am here.

I am aware of my dreams. As I am aware of my dreams I can change the past, the present and the future. For all time is right now. In my dream state I am living in my past and in my future and really in my present. As I am aware of my dreams I can easily stop the story and change it instantly. As I do this I change my present experiences. The illustration is so perfectly illumined by the spreadsheet on my computer. My computer is so beautifully sophisticated, so inherently complex. When the mathematical spreadsheet is filled with figures and numbers the program is designed to assist the user. All I need do is to change one number and all of the corresponding numbers, all of the various computations, all of the various modalities instantly change mathematically correct.

By just changing one number in the system, all of the other numbers are "upgraded" instantly throughout the spreadsheet.

This is the way that my personal life enjoys glowing success. As I change just one aspect of my being correspondingly affected areas are also instantly changed. My brain is a beautiful computer functioning in much the same way as a computer so I have a parameter, a system to operate out of to understand how I work.

Being aware of my dreams, of the sleeping giant in me, of the sophisticated manner in which the computer within my brain operates all are beneficial in my thinking toward enjoying success in my personal life.

The fail-safe nature of the operation of my brain, my inner computer, has been ignored by me for centuries. I have seen some things happen and others not. I thought it was just by chance, it was luck, and it was destiny, an accident of fate for me.

To effectively program my brain means that there must be a consistency about me. There must be continuity in my thought; there must be a discipline in my nature that encourages me to keep on keeping on even in the face of all of the inhibiting responses that seem to come forth.

One of the most difficult things for me is put a cause in motion day after day after day and not see results. Why! I believe I have done everything right, but still no response from the principle, from the law of the universe, the cause that I had put into motion should have brought a response, an effect equal to the cause.

Upon closer observation and honest appraisal, I had to admit that I doubted at times. This doubt was putting another cause in motion, one which conflicted with the original cause and hence no result. At other times I felt inferior to the great blessing I sought and this lack of worthiness for what I sought was putting another cause in motion. Also, there were times that my desire was for the "good" of others, while it was more likely to make "me look good in the eyes of others" than to be really helpful to them who did not need MY help in any event.

Every moment of every day I speak my word that my brain uses its total capacity.

Every moment of every day I speak my word that my body is the temple of the living god--absolutely perfect!

Every moment of every day I speak my word that I LOVE unconditionally, nonjudgmentally MYSELF and absolutely everyone in my world.

Every moment of every day I speak my word that the world in which I live is harmonious and peaceful.

Every moment of every day I speak my word that the words that I speak manifest themselves absolutely.

Every moment of every day I listen to the divine within me and respond to its leading of my reality and enjoy a harmonious, abundant, rewarding relationship with all.

Every day I say: I need no one, I want no one, but I totally, thoroughly enthusiastically enjoy everyone!

SUCCESS IN MY FAMILY LIFE

My family is humanity. My family is mankind. My family is the teeming masses of men, women and children on the face of the Earth.

I create my family in my eyes good!

I create my family as happy, harmonious, fulfilled and fulfilling for themselves and all in their world.

How do I remain harmonious with my family, how do I keep a successful attitude about my relationships with my blood relatives and my universal relatives everywhere when they persist in speaking about unhappiness, wars, and threats of war?

Every now and then "I create as a test for me" someone stopping me on the street and saying it is so terrible what the government is doing, look at all of the accidents—that is such a shame, why are people so greedy, why is there so much hate in the world, how can we help our neighbors, or, "when will the third world war begin?" These questions may come as a stab in the back to a person who is keeping their consciousness on high. It is not so! It is easy for one to die and relinquish the world and no longer take responsibility for his thinking. The responsible being is the one who regardless what others do on all sides, stands firm on principle and sees through the illusion to the absolute truth of every circumstance—peace, harmony, love, right action and truth.

It is EASY to be with someone who has no problems and is always filled with love, peace and joy. The test of my inner fortitude, of my personal integrity, of my awareness of the principle is how well I stand up to adverse comments which are not true and do not fall subject to their content.

I am not the temporal judge or jury for any being. One of my friends came to me and said her relationship was coming to an end with her husband. I asked her if that was what she desired. She said "no." She cited many tales of woe and gave many illustrations of infidelity. I asked her if she had seen it, had she had first hand knowledge. She again said "no." Then I said that we do not believe in appearances. If she loved her husband see him as one of the purest, most beautiful beings on the face of the Earth. She worked with me. A new man emerged in the relationship ONLY BECAUSE A NEW WOMAN EMERGED FIRST TO HAVE THE NEW RELATIONSHIP WITH THE NEW MAN—albeit the same husband she had first married, but she changed her opinion about THEM. The relationship reverses itself regularly.

The more I read in public literature on man's inhumanity to man the more I realize why this is not for me. Every little thought like that which I place in my thinking gives added power, gives added control, gives added life to such concepts IN MY WORLD and I do not choose to have them there. I am the master of my thought, my life and my world.

My human world is constantly changing. The family relationships that I have today may be quite different from those which I have only a moment from now. However, regardless what relationships I have, I am the master of them and their ever changing nature, growing, improving, expanding, all provide me with a colorful spectrum in which I live and express myself. It is up to me to keep the colors clear and pure. To see beyond the outer appearance of dust and dirt that may befoul the exterior but leaves the interior untouched.

I constantly speak my word and claim the truth about all relationships in my world and these relationships always rise to the expectations that I have for them.

It is not that I make relationships good. They ARE good. It is just that all relationships may be beneficial or may be non beneficial. That is a choice that can be made and it can be made from time to time. In my world, the choice that is made is beneficial. This is my choice. When anyone wants to have a non beneficial experience all that is done is to have it NOT IN MY WORLD!

It is totally unimportant what a person does in another world, in their world, in relation to others, it only matters what they do in my world. This is the only control and the only power I wield—the power IN MY WORLD!

For me to have successful family relationships in my world I define who my family are. For me, my family is all. However they appear in my world, brushing against me on the street, flowing forth out of photographs, touching my ears and eyes through the media or daily contact, it does not matter; all are members of my family. The family of mankind.

While I love everyone, all are my family; I permit each in MY WORLD to find their pathway alone with total freedom and acceptance.

SUCCESS IN MY SOCIAL LIFE

There are those who are leaders and those who are the followers. There are those who are shepherds and those who are the sheep. There are those who are way showers and those to whom the way is shown. There are those who are independent souls who follow their own inward leading with absolute inner assurance and there are those who flounder helpless along life's way.

I choose to be a free spirit. I choose to be one who walks my own path. Anyone who desires to walk with me is joyously welcomed. I choose to lovingly shepherd my ideas and my dreams and those who have kindred dreams are welcome to walk the way with me and share the fruits of the glorious achievement with me. I choose to be one who follows the inner leading independently. For me I see everyone free to walk as they choose and when they would see "my" way or their own "inner" way, I who have walked that way too will happily share my path with all.

In my social life I am always sharing with others. The multitude comes to me or I to them and we are always one. As I have a happy smile on my face everyone in my world responds to it with great joy.

I LOVE EVERYONE IN MY WORLD.

If there is anyone in the world who does not love me, I am totally unaware of it. I love everyone and since I am love I can only recognize love from others. Everyone loves me absolutely because I love everyone absolutely. This is not just a reciprocal action it is because the world is my mirror and whatever I am is reflected back from MY WORLD to me.

It would be so easy to run with the crowd and do that which would bring me their applause. It would be so easy to lull myself in the thank yours from those who would use me and when I was useless and forlorn they would throw me advice with the others who lost in the game of natural selection.

The game is played in the bars of the world, in the living rooms of too many homes, in the super hostess or host who are not satisfied until their guests are overstuffed, over drunk and a danger on the roadway. But of course it always takes two to play any game of this social nature.

I have been delighted to see more and more people who have learned a basic word from the language. That word used to be "yes" but now that word is "no." This is a step in the right direction, but it is still lacks the dignity which the occasion deserves.

As I live in my positive universe more and more I find it more than natural always to speak positively. When I am offered more food than I choose to eat I say: "YES, THANK YOU, I HAVE HAD ENOUGH." Or when more liquid refreshment is served than I pleasure to drink I say: "YES, THANK YOU, IT WAS QUITE ENOUGH." As I keep my thoughts positive, it is not a matter of refusal but a blessing and acceptance of what I had already received.

Sometimes I think I am just playing games with words, but it is not so. Every word I speak has power. I choose to put the power of my thought into words that will bring forth my choice for them.

I choose to keep my thoughts pure and my words clear. To do so requires that I create about me a world in which the words I hear are a reflection of my own inner purity.

Some people think it is "cool" to use befouling language because it is "in." The words are vile and demeaning. These words are not said in my presence because I choose to remain in the purest state of consciousness possible. I just do not create others saying those things in my life.

In the quietness of social gatherings I choose to verge the conversations onto philosophy, creative thinking, positive living and joyous expansion of consciousness. As I do this more and more people join our discussion because there is a vital interest in these things. I am delighted.

Everywhere I go I enter into the deeper philosophical discussion of life. The lighter vein, the humorous vein, the gross or vile topics do not find their way into my thinking.

This is not because I feel better than others. It is only that there is so much to be said, there is so much to be thought and the days disappear so quickly and not nearly half the things I wanted to think, the things I wanted to dream, the creative imaginings that were flooding my consciousness not nearly half were expressed. It is such a joy to share these beautiful philosophical concepts and everyone in my world is eager to hear about it.

I am a desired guest at every social gathering. People enjoy having me in their homes. People enjoy having me in their worlds. People enjoy having me in their inner most depth of their hearts for that is where I belong!

SUCCESS IN MY BUSINESS LIFE

For most of my life I have conducted my business life in the standard way. I have sought after sales, after business, after relationships, after working harmoniously with others. I have done the standard courses in success management of my offices and my companies. It was an exciting and very busy schedule that I followed to be a success in business.

I experienced wonderful success in my business. This technique works wonderfully well and I am an expert in its use. The only difficulty in the programs is that if one does not continuously maintain this success consciousness the fruit of success fades quickly.

Is there a better way to enjoy success in business?

I have read the books of dozens of authors, I have the cassette programs of many major programs and all offer a most revealing approach to success.

After reading all of these there was but one conclusion that the perceptive reader could come to: Success depends on the attitude of the individual.

But along with explicitly revealing that success depends wholly on the attitude of the individual, many other techniques were also revealed.

Work hard. Memorize names. Make contacts. Be friendly. Be a good listener. Ask for the contract.

What is the RIGHT way?

Is there a RIGHT way?

Who knows the right way and knowing it, does it work?

Or is it only for those special people for whom the technique works?

What magical something happens to everyone who is successful?

The magical something that happens to every successful person is that they live what they believe. While it is true that anyone can sell anything to anybody at any time there are mighty few top producers. There are very few who have achieved the height of business success.

The question most properly asked is:

What are my criteria of business success?

Is my criteria: a top salary or income, a fine office, a good reputation among my peers, family, friends, community, travel, a fine home and car, good health, long life, peace of mind, or whatever?

Climbing the standard ladder of success brings with it the many woes of labor and long hours and many failures. Traveling the success-way usually means not being home with the children while they are growing up and being a pawn of the success market.

There is a better way and a way that is absolutely successful for every person who chooses to follow this way. The way is the way of pure consciousness.

Pure Consciousness To Success

For most young people and adults seeking their place in the Sun the picture of being successful are having all the things that their heart desires and the time to enjoy them. Another aspect is having authority and control over others. The product of the success that through which success comes is one of the last considerations.

Why are the product, the service, and the very form through which success comes given last if any importance?

. . . . because it is of the last importance.

The most important indications of success are things.

Things make the most vivid mental picture and are the easiest to bring out of the infinite universal consciousness. The only difficulty is that I think that I must "work" for my success; or since I have not earned success it is not truly something that I have the "right" to enjoy.

The most important part of success the journey.

Success is meaningless to so many people because the journey was unrewarding. The journey was meaningless. The journey was destructive to their standards, their will, their inner charisma and their spirit.

Success is most significant when the journey is both fun and meaningful. For the journey to be fun and meaningful it is important to know the JOURNEY I desire to take. This is the difficult part, not the journey, but the why and wherefore of the journey. What is the purpose of the journey, only to get where I want to go, or is it an adventure all on its own worthy of enjoying and experiencing?

When I have the answer to this question, success for me is fully assured.

I find the purpose for my life and for my journey by turning to the divine center within me. There the answer always shines clearly and brilliantly. There is never any doubt about my quest.

I know many people who fit the description: He lives only for his children. He lives only for his wife. He lives only for money. He lives only for fishing. He lives only for vacation time. He lives to eat. She only lives to bake. She begins living when her husband comes home from work. The child lives in a dreamland. They live for their friends. The list is endless!

I live to travel the world and share my philosophy with all who desire to hear. I live to live what I believe. I live to love myself and everyone in my world.

These are most interesting purposes for living. Many of these reasons are satisfied only when another being is present. Living such a life puts me under the control of another who accepts my loving them or rejects it. By my living to express my selfhood through another they manipulate me by how they respond to my giving. When I live to be myself and am only interested in being that which I am, then I alone can control the responses of my beingness to my world. I alone direct my life.

Climbing this ladder of success is quite different from one in which things are important.

However, having things is nice too. Do I have to give up all the nice things of the world to have these inner virtues or can I have both?

Naturally the answer is: I can have both.

All things begin as an idea in consciousness. All emotions are but an expression of consciousness. All people too are but consciousness expressing itself in its multiple forms.

The pure consciousness of success means that I daily take time to become still and listen to the magnificent giant within me that eagerly wants to tell me how best I can do the things that I desire to do for myself here and now.

My primary aim for myself, therefore, is to determine what it is that is important to me. As I listen within I listen with my outer ear as well as my inner ear. I hear myself speaking with my own voice and in the mannerisms that are most peculiar to me. I come to know and understand what is meant by the still quiet voice.

When this voice speaks to me a great calm settles down over me. I feel an inner wisdom and guidance and I feel a peace that is impossible to describe. The most interesting thing about this procedure is that I do not have to be a practiced meditator. I do not have to follow any ritual to achieve this awareness. I just let go and let my purity and my peace manifest itself in me as me through me.

I am not necessarily guided to create great paintings, write great books or do any specific work. The inspiration in me more likely helps me to be open to the thousands of channels through which the infinite creative cause works. As I love myself and all in my world, the barrier is broken and the treasure trove of all good floods forth into my life.

EXERCISE:

To walk the way of success in pure consciousness I sit quietly in any pleasant setting.

I practice deep breathing. This allows my body to fully relax and release all tensions.

I begin my affirmations for business success as follows:

I enjoy being me! I enjoy being me!

I love me! I love me! I love me!

I love everyone in my world!

I am a success in everything!

Business success comes to me when I find the perfect motivation for success. If I feel I must work for it, so I shall have to work for it. If I feel that I can tune into the universal power then that alone is the source of my success. Whatever I feel I MUST do for success, so it is.

Success is a program which when put into practice functions perfectly every time.

The most wonderful and rewarding way to success is through pure consciousness. Maintaining my oneness with the reality I am within and listening to this voice within me, which is me, sharing with me that which I am.

Success floods into my life only as I am consistent in the process that I expedite for my goal. When the process is one of purity and wholeness, then my success is assured from the divine within me. Every doorway in my consciousness is opened. I am one as the universal consciousness that is me. No matter what needs to be given to me, what needs to be made known to me, what I must understand, understanding and wisdom are mine from this infallible source.

Should I at any time change my program for success I begin at the very beginning once again. So long as I am constant in myself, in my program, in my use of the law of Cause and Effect manifesting itself through my success affirmations, the results are definite.

Should I wander from principle I am may return at any time and begin again. There is no failure on this. There is only a matter of when I choose to begin my journey into the realm of my pure consciousness for my magnificent success.

SUCCESS IN MY WORLD

The brain is a peculiar device.

There are numberless ways in which I can "reach" into the hidden recesses of the brain. The best possible way is through meditation, introspection and silence. For in these three the universal wisdom manifests itself to me totally.

Other ways that many have used are called the arts of the mystery schools. To begin to list them here would take a volume for just this purpose. To allude to them is all I will do at this moment.

Some always like to "do" something when they seek the divine reality within them. So for this purpose decks of cards have proven most interesting. The cards are given symbols, which have meaning for the verities of life. Then as these cards are dealt in their very specific way the story of one's life has been said to be revealed in a very "correct" manner. This technique was used in every nation of the globe at one time or another. It is still in use throughout the world and these cards can be purchased at most bookstores.

Utilization of a medium has proven to be interesting to many people around the world. A medium is a person who gives themselves up, usually, to another consciousness. Most usually it is someone who has died in the sense of leaving their body behind and moving on to another dimension. However many are individuals who have died and the consciousness is still in the world and they seemly have access to knowledge not presently known to the living.

Reading sticks are dropped; dice, tea leaves, lines on the hands, feet, face and top of the head are other ways of looking into the inner consciousness of mankind written on the surface of his being or in objects which speak about it.

Allowing the stars and birth dates and signs to speak about the individual and his past, present and future have borne fruit for many advocates of this technique.

The wonder of magic has played an important role in all of history as man sought to know the mystery of life.

And in all of this what actually took place was only an intuitive awareness of what was going on in the consciousness of every being. The secrets of the universe are not revealed through media such as these. These techniques only touch the surface of eternal knowledge. These methods of searching the depth of man's heart are but looking at the film over the outer shell of wisdom. While they may be correct in many instances, while they may reveal some of the inner wisdom of the universal allness even as our conscious brain gives us of this great field of understanding, it is only a drop out of the infinite ocean of all wisdom.

These programs are in no way bad. They are in no wise improper or wrong. They are human approaches to infinity. How much more impressive when I go to the center of my own being and read from the pages of the eternal wisdom that which is written so clearly and completely in my own inner beingness. There is no "false information" or "part truths" for within me, within all creation, is the mind of the creator seeking to reveal itself to all who would listen and be informed of that which each is and always will be.

I gain success in my world, in understanding my world, in living harmoniously in my world, however only as I go to the one source of all wisdom within my inner being.

The one universal mind, which is present in all, through all and as all, awaits my recognition that it is in me to be used and enjoyed to the ultimate.

It is not necessary for me to say that I will use the understanding gained from my inner source for some good and noble purpose. It is not important for me to distribute that which I am to the underprivileged world. What is revealed to me I am totally free to use in any beautiful, beneficial or unbeneficial way that I may choose.

I may enjoy success in my world, as I am one as my world. When I think that then the broadness, the grandness and the unfathomableness is available to me.

I grow too to reach out to a more wonderful scope of my thinking as I include in my world my solar system; the vast reaches of the heavens and solar systems beyond my own. For all is revealed to me as I open my thinking to my infinite self-dwelling in this corporal being which I call my body.

My brain has just begun to function. I have not asked of my brain that it reveal itself to me. As I do this the plan of the universe is made clear to me. The purpose of my being on Earth is made clear. The game of life I am playing here comes into sharp focus. The rules of the game are clarified for me and I am no longer in the dark as to how to effectively play this game I call my life here and now.

SUCCESS IN MY QUEST FOR EXCELLENCE

Now, nobly, I begin my quest for excellence.

I have found the indwelling pathway to the source of all wisdom. It is clear to me. I have found the key that opens the book of life unto me, and on this physical plane there are no more secrets. All the greatness of the allness in me is fully revealed.

If I were a prince I would be prepared to be king. I would go to a school for kings. Perhaps in the castle itself and there only the finest minds of the universe would preen me for the high office I would one day ascend to and hold. Every consideration would be given to me. Respect and honor would be heaped upon me even before I was worthy of it, for I am the son of a king and one day I too would be king. I was made ready in every possible manner. I was taught the social graces. I was taught the mannerisms of the court which one day I would reign over. I was taught the politics of life so that one day when it was my "turn" to take charge I could do so wisely and well. I was taught to have time to relax and time to be foolish as well as to be wise. All were allowed as part of my nature as a royal heir. Primary in my teaching would be the realization that I was of royal blood and heir only because I was divine. My right of rule was from on high and my right could not be taken from me. No matter apparently how poorly I might rule, my right of reign was divine and all had to subject themselves to me because of this divine right. The idea is that no matter how poorly I might behave or how badly I might perform the right was mine by divine authority and could never be taken away.

Every being on the face of the Earth has a divine right.

My Divine Right

I have a divine right to be successful. How do I know this and by what proof do I come by this assumption? Do all have the same right? Are there any beings on the face of the Earth who do not have this right?

I might answer my last question first: Is there any being on the face of the Earth who does not have a divine right to be successful and fulfilled in life?

The answer is: YES! Strangely enough there are some on the face of the Earth who do not have this right. The reason: They do not take the right.

The right exists for one and all. But no one must take the right to be fulfilled and to experience it. I have the freedom to accept or reject anything that I choose.

I choose to take my divine right and utilize it fully.

Upon what basis can I make the assumption this is true?

When I look at the universe in which I live I am assured that it has been formed and is maintained by an infinite wisdom. Some guiding intelligence created all that was not in the beginning and created all that is now. All was created out of nothingness into a somethingness, which because it came out of nothingness is always nothingness even though it is something. The something is only an illusion of the nothingness being something whereas it is and always will only be nothing. Only an infinite knowingness, an unlimited intelligence could play such a compound conceptualization and have it be and yet not be at the same instant while all the while being a fascinating and interesting experience for all that it has created.

Furthermore. That which created that which is not is both that which it created and that which is not. So whatever it is created whatever is and is that which it created, so that which it created is that which created it.

Hence I am that which created me and I am all that I create.

Since I am the creative intelligence of the universe why do I think that I am not infinite wisdom?

Just as the son of a king likes to pretend he is not a prince and play like all of the other boys in his kingdom; so too I like to play that I am not the infinite creator what is always creating and pretend to be the illusion of limitation.

While pretending that I am not a prince does not make me not a prince. All of my friends know that I am a prince and enjoy my presence because it adds luster to their own life. Within me I know that I am always the prince even though I may tell myself time and again that it is not so. I may affirm this false belief until I come to "believe" that what I have said about myself is not true and so for me and for the experience I have it will not be true even though it is true and I can never make it not true. My claiming that I am human makes me no less divine.

My life will always be directed by this infinite knowingness within me even when I say it is not there. I am always tuned into my indwelling reality even when I say I am not so tuned. I cannot tune out from my inner self. I may seek to do so and confuse myself. I may say that I do not hear the inner vibrations, but in my relaxed moments the roar of the inner music sounds like a great symphony and my curiosity is piqued and I must listen even though I say to myself it is not there and there is not music in my ears.

Hide though I might from this inner quest for success and the awareness of who I am what I am goes on.

The "great minds" of the universe have been those who have listened to the inner self and though they were thought to be foolish and unwise, history has found them to be the real royalty of all time. These men of philosophy, these men of great judgment and understanding, though they were not kings understandably they would not want to be, the power they held over their universe was magnificent. It was not a power controlling the lives of others; it was not a power which by its nature is self-corrupting; it was not a power that manipulated kings and courts; it was not a power that sought to praise itself over another, rather by its very nature it was a power that chose to inspire greatness in all.

The story of kings and their kingdoms are found in history books. The chimera of their stories are the passing illusions of all time and are relegated to the back shelves and the dust of eternity. Their wars, changing borders, intrigues, loves and sorrows are of so transitory a nature that mankind calls them but a fairy tale. These were flesh and blood beings. They were what I call quite real but their reality was like the morning mist in the fields, only to be melted away later by the warming sun of wisdom that lasts eternally and which by its light makes all things known.

The kings are worshipped and honored in history. They are thought to be the ruling class. Yet every king worth his salt had both the court jester and the court philosopher, minister-advisor who were the intelligent guides behind the king's decisions.

The court jester kept the king amused and in this very amusement the jester was wise indeed. For in the humor he used he was able to advise the king and show up the foolishness of many of the misadventures of the king. Thus the country benefitted from the wisdom of so lowly a man.

The court minister, the philosopher, the advisor to the king was a man whose wisdom lives on though his name may never be known in the annals of history. That his personal fame continues into history was absolutely unimportant to him. Some advisors, to be sure sought after power, but most were the wisdom behind the crown seeking no self-aggrandizement.

Generally unknown to history but a practice that is known to have been there is how the philosopher-minister-advisors spoke to and taught their kings.

The kings led an active and busy life with little time for study and introspection. So it was when the king and queen had finished their nightly visit, the queen would go to her own chambers by the many passages throughout the castle. Then it was the philosopher-minister-advisor would come to the king's bed and speak to the king as he slept. He poured forth into the king's sleeping brain the wise interpretations and speculations of governing policy. He would guide the king of international policies. He would speak to the king of cases that were to come before his highness relative to being judge over his people.

So it was that in his sleep, while his conscious thinking brain was at rest, the philosopher-minister-advisor talking to the sleeping king would inculcate into the great man's thought system intelligent management for his kingdom.

Within me is the great philosopher-minister-advisor. For I am the king of my realm. I am the ruler of my consciousness. I am the one who makes the choices for what I do in my daily activities. I am the one who decides what is worthy of my attention. I am the one who makes the judgments about what has happened in my life, what is happening and what will happen in my world.

Alone I am the philosopher-king for me.

The illustration of a king and his realm bodes well for me in my life. For my body and my circumstances is my realm. That is easy for me to see. The realm is meaningless without a king. However to this moment in my life I have not fully felt that I was a king. I have never felt superior to another nor have I felt another superior to me.

Like it or not I am the king of my universe. Like it or not I am the philosopher-minister-advisor and ruler of myself and all in my kingdom.

Perhaps it would be wise to accept this reality and get about the business of being the philosopher-king, which I am and stop fighting that this is true. As I accept this truth I can more quickly begin to benefit from it and begin to live in the awareness of what is IS and forgetting the illusions of what is not is not!

The infinite intelligence of the universe is in all, through all and as all. There is nothing separate from this allness. All that is is it and all that it is IS.

How did the great philosophers touch the philosophers' stone, changing base metals into gold, changing basic ideas into eternal wisdom?

The method is so simple that I have believed it was not true.

Within me lies all wisdom. Within me lies the truth that has built this universe. Within me lies the genius that is the foundation of all knowledge, the knowable and the unknowable truth. Within me lies the pathway to this inner reality and it is knowable. Within me lies the reality that there is no unknowableness. For what the infinite can think and know, that which it thinks through and as and in, thinks the same thoughts that it thinks.

Some might call this a technique; I call it practice.

Whenever I desire to know anything I immediately say to myself I know. Then I answer myself with the VERY FIRST thought that comes to my brain and it is correct.

My brain has been programed to think that it does not know so it chooses not to know because it has been so programed. It is not that the brain does not have access to all knowledge; it is just that I have programed it not to know and because I programed it not to know, even though it knows, it does not know.

Today I begin a new programing for my brain.

Today I program my brain with the reality that it knows all things and that the infinite wisdom of the universe is in it as it through it and my brain has absolute wisdom.

Just as psychologists have studied the patterns of the brain and how it thinks, they have studied the eyes relative to thinking. They noted that when certain questions were asked the student would look up or down and as they did this they knew the "correct" answer. There are access modes to infinite consciousness and this is what the philosophers used, this is what the genius uses, this is what I use.

Access Mode Number One

I stop thinking. I listen within. I speak my word and the answer is completely and fully there, correct.

I quietly accept that the infinite thinker, which I am, is thinking through me and I know all things.

I give up all feeling and responsibility that I must know the answer and realize that all the wisdom of the universe is known in the universal within me and there is nothing more that needs to be known. I am all wisdom.

Access Mode Number Two

I take a specific thought into my inner consciousness.

I listen as my brain processes this thought and the perfect right answer is formulated.

The moment the formulation is complete and I feel comfortable with it, I give it out to my world.

It is correct!

Access Mode Number Three

I consider some concept in which I desire to formulate a more comprehensive awareness before I go to sleep; I sleep on the concept and I awaken in the morning with the answer.

I keep a pad of paper next to my bed so that as inspiration comes in the middle of the night, which it usually does, I may note it down and not disturb my sleep.

I just gently consider the concept before I go to sleep and then in my sleep I totally release any further anxiety over the ideas. The idea comes forth fully revealed.

I assure myself that I have no anxiety for my solution. Anxiety only slows down the process.

EXERCISE:

I practice being a philosopher-king!

I recognize that within me is all knowledge.

I recognize that within me is the pathway to success.

I know that I am success now in all things.

I know that every thought I think is true.

I know that every word I speak is positive.

I practice daily the art of recognizing that I am master of my world and that my world is perfect.

Every evening I have a pad of paper next to my bed and I write down the solution to every desire during the night to awaken in the morning fully refreshed and knowing full well the answer to any question I may have had.

I trust the playful spiritual self within to reveal to me my divine plan and purpose for my life.

My quest for success is fulfilled BECAUSE I know what I desire from my life.

I practice taking the first thing right off the top of my head and knowing that it is correct.

I know the infinite creative cause of the universe is me and I enjoy living in this awareness now.
